

2,448 patients lifted.

Backs Carry Canada. The strain of caring for Canadians never eases. Yet despite daunting challenges and stark new realities, Canada's health care professionals can always be counted on to pull together and put patients first. And when the job involves treating back pain the pressure is felt by everyone, from overtaxed health care professionals to Canada itself, burdening our economy with some $8 billion a year in added health care costs and lost productivity. But if we keep working together, we'll reduce the strain on our patients, our system, and our economy. That's something we can all feel good about. Let's get Canadians back on their feet.
